SEYMOUR, INDIANA, SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1910.

PRICE TWO CENTS

MEN'S MEETING

Lawrence McTurnan to Speak Sunday Evening.

Arrangements are being made to accommodate several hundred men at the Men's Union Meeting, which will be held Sunday evening at the First Methodist church. It is believed that the idea of holding the meetings in the evening will make them more popular than when conducted in the afternoon. This has been tried very successfully in other cities.

According to the plan upon which these meetings are conducted, only laymen of the church will be invited to deliver the principal addresses and it is the endeavor of the committee who have the meetings in charge to make them as interesting and profitable to the average man as possible.

In securing Lawrence McTurnan, of Indianapolis, for the address tomorrow, the members of the program committee feel that they have been very fortunate as he has a wide reputation as an able speaker. For several years Mr. McTurnan held an important position in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction and is recognized as one of the foremost educators in Indiana.

Joseph C. Edwards, president of the Methodist Brotherhood, will preside at the meeting tomorrow evening. Arrangements for special music by the male quartette have been made.

"PE-RU-NA DID WONDERS FOR ME."

MRS. ROSA BOYER.

MRS. ROSA BOYER, 1421 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., writes: "If any one has reason to praise Peruna it is surely myself."

"Last spring I became so run down from the serious effects of a lingering cold, that several complications united in pulling me down. I could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit."

"I finally tried Peruna and it did wonders for me. In two weeks I was like another person, and in a month I felt better than I ever had before."

"I thank Peruna for new life and strength. I send you two pictures, so you can see what Peruna has done for me."

Better Than for Years.

Mrs. Mary F. Jones, Burning Springs, Ky., writes:

"I wish to speak a word in praise of your highly valued Peruna, as I have been blessed with the golden opportunity of giving it a fair and impartial test, and can say that I have had better health, far better, since I have been using it than for quite a number of years before."

"One of my neighbors had stomach trouble. I recommended Peruna to her, and now she is well and healthy, after having been pronounced hopeless by several physicians."

A. A. ANDERSON

Will Become Manager of Springfield Illinois, R. & L. Company

A. A. Anderson, general manager of the Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern Traction Company, has resigned his position to become manager of the Springfield, Illinois Railway & Lighting Company. He will move to Springfield, Ill. about June 1, when he will assume his new duties.

Mr. Anderson is recognized as one of the best traction men in Indiana and under his management the road has been very prosperous. He has had much experience with interurban work, having been with the Indianapolis and Columbus Traction Company before he became manager of the Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern Traction Company.

The officials of the Springfield Company have made several offers to Mr. Anderson, and the last one was too attractive to refuse. In his new position he will have charge of the street railway, electric lighting plants, gas works, and other power and lighting companies controlled by the Springfield, Illinois Railway & Lighting Company.

Mr. Anderson was manager of the I. C. & S. Traction Company when the extension from Columbus to Seymour was made, and he has always made an effort to provide the best service possible. Under his management the passenger and freight business has increased, and many improvements for the betterment of the service have been made.

For several years Mr. Anderson was also general manager of the Indianapolis and Louisville Traction Company at the time that road was completed, which position he retained until the traffic became so heavy that it was necessary that he give his undivided attention to the business of the Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern road.

The successor to Mr. Anderson has not yet been announced by the officials of the I. C. & S. Traction Co.

RED MEN'S MEETING.

A Large Number of Members From This District Will Attend.

As announced in the Republican two weeks ago the district meeting of the Improved Order of Red Men will be held in this city on next Thursday.

There will be both afternoon and evening sessions. A. V. Lawell, chairman of the committee on arrangements, is leaving nothing undone to make the meeting a success.

Nine counties are represented in the district with a total of forty-two tribes and it is expected that most of the tribes will send representatives to the meeting.

The Columbus tribe is expected to send the largest visiting delegation and large delegations are expected from Crothersville and Scottsburg.

Both the afternoon and evening sessions will be held in the opera house for the accommodation of the large number of visitors who are expected to attend.

Besides the speeches by prominent members of the order there will be degree work in which the home team and several visiting teams are expected to take part.

Prizes will be offered in the degree work which is expected to add considerably to the general interest taken in the work.

If the weather is favorable a street parade will be given.

Among the prominent members of the order expected to be present are the Great Sachem, Great Junior Sagamore, Past Great Sachem, and Great Chief of Records.

This is expected to be made one of the best meetings of the order ever held in Indiana and the Majestic will be crowded.

Special cars will probably be run on the traction lines and arrangements made for the late out-going cars to accommodate the visiting Indians.

The sound of the war whoop will be heard throughout the afternoon and evening till near midnight, and a number of innocent victims will be rounded up at the opera house.

The local order of Red Men is growing rapidly and bids fair to become one of the strong orders in the city in point of members in the near future.

BURNING BRUSH.

Gives Appearance of Forest Fire, East of City.

Many persons in the city were much concerned Friday evening over the appearance of what seemed to be a large fire east of the city.

The bright light was noticed soon after dark and it was feared that a forest fire was raging and that much damage would result before it could be gotten under control.

Investigation, however, showed that a large amount of brush and weeds were being burned on a large tract of land about five miles east of the city and that there was no danger of the fire spreading to other fields.

Much damage has resulted from forest fires in this part of the state, during the part few days and the farmers are using extraordinary precaution in starting fires upon their land, and are carefully watching them until they are entirely extinguished.

George Murray Now Member of Police Force.

George Murray will begin his duties this evening as a regular member on the night police force, taking the place of P. J. Welsh who resigned a few days ago.

Mr. Murray was appointed extra policeman several weeks ago when Mr. Welsh was given a short leave of absence, and it was understood at that time that he would get a regular position in the department as soon as there was a vacancy.

Mr. Welsh resigned in order to take a position with a railroad in Alabama.

OPEN OF NIGHTS

DINNER FOR 2,000

Great Feast for Churchmen
of Indiana to Be Spread
On April 12.

MISSIONARY CONVENTION

Movement That Is Sweeping Churches of United States Will Strike Indianapolis in April—Eminent Speakers Will Be Heard at the Dinner and at Sessions of the Convention.

The dinner that is to mark the opening of the Laymen's Missionary convention at Indianapolis on the night of April 12 promises to be the most notable feast in the church history of Indiana. The dinner will be open to laymen from all churches in all parts of the state, and the effort is making to have at least 2,000 churchmen at the table. The entertainment committee of the Indianapolis convention has promised the general committee that it will take care of all the laymen in comfort who attend the dinner. Tomlinson Hall, with the largest capacity of any auditorium in Indiana, has been engaged for the dinner as well as for the sessions of the convention on the following two days.

The promoters of the dinner have carefully estimated the capacity of Tomlinson Hall, where many notable political conventions, music festivals and other larger gatherings have been held, and if the attendance of churchmen makes it necessary, the corridor, as well as the main hall will be given over to the laymen at the feast. The balconies and gallery, which will seat perhaps 2,000, will also be open to laymen who desire to hear the orators of the occasion.

The convention of the Laymen's Missionary Movement will be an educational affair—to educate the business men of Indiana that the responsibility for the evangelization of the world is a responsibility which rests upon the laymen of America, and the speakers at the opening dinner will follow this trend of thought in their discussions. Some of the star speakers who are to be heard at the Indianapolis convention will be the after-dinner orators. One of them will be J. Campbell White, one of the world's most conspicuous missionary authorities. He is one of the founders of the Laymen's Missionary Movement which is now sweeping the cities of the United States like a prairie fire, and he is also general secretary of the movement. He has been in public Christian work for the last twenty years.

Mr. White was graduated in 1890 from the University of Wooster, Ohio. For the next two years he traveled among the colleges of the United States, one year as college secretary of the International Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association and one year as secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement. After a year of special study he went to Calcutta, India, as pioneer secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in that city, where he worked until 1903. During these ten years he was associated with missionaries of many societies and from various nations.

He returned to America at the call of his own church to assist in placing its missionary work upon a more adequate basis, and was one of the organizers of the men's movement in his own denomination.

At a meeting held on Nov. 15, 1906, at which the Laymen's Missionary Movement was organized, Mr. White gave the only address made on that historic occasion. He was at once called to the leadership of the movement and has been its general secretary from the beginning. He has addressed all of the great conventions held under the auspices of the movement. He was one of the deputation which in 1907 visited Great Britain and organized national committees of the movement in England and Scotland.

Three of the most widely circulated pamphlets published by the Laymen's Missionary Movement were written by Mr. White: "The Genesis and Significance of the Laymen's Missionary Movement"; "Our Share of the World"; and "Methods of Enlisting Men in Missions."

One of the strong features of the Indianapolis convention will be an all-day meeting for women at the Central Avenue M. E. Church on April 14. It will be in charge of the Women's Social Missionary Union. One of the speakers will be Mrs. George Sherwood Eddy, former national secretary of the Y. W. C. A. in India. Mrs. C. W. Fairbanks, wife of the former vice president, who has just returned from a tour of the world, when she visited many mission fields, will be invited to address the women. An elaborate luncheon at noon will be one of the features for the women.

A third speaker on the dinner program will be a Chicago layman who will discuss missionary work from a business man's viewpoint.

To get the enjoyment which the dinner will offer to the men of Indiana churches, those who desire to attend should at once communicate with H. F. Laffame, executive secretary of the Indianapolis convention, whose headquarters are at the Y. M. C. A. building in that city.

The Easter Lily Elf.

"If love were like the lily," as once a poet said,
I'm sure this sheaf she carries would kiss her lips so red.
If I were like the lily I couldn't help myself---
I'd simply have to kiss her, this darling little elf!
ROBERTUS LOVE.

Mrs. Johnson's
Easter Opening

By KATHLEEN DOUGLAS.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

"THERE! Everything's ready at last. Land o' Goshen, these Easter openin's almost take my life! I'm as tired as a dog. Here comes ole Mis' Williams. She'll nose everything over, like as not, and then not buy anything—ole fool!"

"How do, Mis' Williams? Anything in particular I can show you today? Just want to look around a little? Do! Here's one of the latest models—the festive matron—very chick, ain't it? Would you like to try it on? Too big, do you think? Well, you know most of the hats this year are like at-tarmobile tires."

"Walk right in, Mis' Simpson. Tired? Set right down on that lop. Here, Johnny, take this stool, and Lotty can hev this hassock (hope she won't get everything stuck up with that candy). Johnny came near bein' drowned last month—took an hour to rusticate him? Land sakes alive! Well, I've always said children wuz a sartin care, but an unsartin blessin'. You want somethin' plain and dark? How do you like this? No; that ain't a cat with a fuchsia in its mouth; it's an owl with a rosebud."

"Good afternoon, Mis' Goodrich. Yes, a beautiful day. How well you're lookin'! My, but you've renewed your age this spring! There's nothin' like workin' in the garden. Sally Tucker married! You don't say! Well, I am surprised. She was an awful hand for the boys, but I tell you when a gal sets on two stools she usually ends by settin' on the floor. Who'd she marry? That art-ist feller? Land, he didn't know enough to come in when it rained, but he did paint beautiful hens, though I never did care much for hens, they're such awful fools, and you know the Bible says we musn't have nothin' to do with fools. I never thought he'd marry, neither; he was so awful in love with himself it must 'a' seemed most like perpetratin' bigamy. Well, a man doesn't come off fool's hill till he's twenty-five or so, and then sometimes he has to be knocked off. Did you know that Ebenezer Cook had married again? They say he and his wife used to quarrel somethin' terri-

bul. One day he riz up and said, 'We'll divide the house.' 'All right,' says she; 'we will. You can hev the outside, and I'll take the inside.'

"That hat looks awful handsome on you, Mis' Allen. I thought of you when I saw the model in Noo York. Ain't that rooster's tail beautiful? So lifelike! And the cherries at the back is fairly temptin'. You want to wear it home? Certainly. Charge it? Oh, very well! Goodby."

"My, I'd hate to be married to her husband. He's so stingy he'd speak in a whisper if it would save his voice. But religious! They say whenever an evangelist comes to town ole Allen wears out the knees of his pants gettin' religion; but, puckerwoozle, I guess he wears out the seats of 'em backslidin' before the year's out. He come in here one night and set down and begun groanin' like. You know he wears his hair way down on to his shoulders. What's his idee in havin' it long that way, I wonder? Perhaps he thinks what'll keep the cold out will keep the heat in, but if I was his wife I'd take a pair of shears and cut it all off some night. Well, he kept on moanin', and, sez I, 'What's the matter?' 'I don't know,' sez he, 'leavin' his head on his two hands. 'I feel awful bad. Sometimes I think it's religion,' sez he, 'and sometimes I think it's worms.' 'Better take a big dose of thoroughwort when you get home,' sez I, 'and find out.' I ain't got no patience with a man like that. He's the kind Amandy Tompkins says hain't got one redeemin' vice. Goin', Mis' Williams? Looks a little like rain, but it's clear overhead. What say? You ain't goin' that way? He-he! Goodby. My, but she's awful funny! Did you ever hear how she come over the border from Canerdy with an alarm clock tied up in her bustle? Just as the custom house officer come along the alarm went off to beat the band."

"AIN'T THAT ROOSTER'S TAIL BEAUTIFUL?"

A Curious Fruit.
A fruit that is in season all the year round in India is the papaw. This grows on a short, pulpy looking tree with leaves like the castor oil plant in shape, but woolly on the surface, and the green pumpkin shaped fruit grows in a cluster at the top. When cut open it has orange colored flesh and a number of black seeds in the center. Its flavor slightly resembles mustard and cress, and, though not generally liked, it is said to be excellent as a digestive aid and to lengthen the lives of those who partake of it regularly.

CAREER OF TSCHAIKOVSKY.

Noted Russian Acquitted of Charge of Revolutionary Conspiracy.

Nicholas Tschaikevsky, who was on trial for criminal activity in the Russian revolutionary organization and was acquitted recently at St. Petersburg, is one of the few remaining figures of the revolutionary movement in Russia in 1870-5 and is sometimes called "father of the Russian revolution." He was the founder of the so called Tschaykovtzi, from which sprang a series of other revolutionary organizations that took part in the struggle between the terrorists and Emperor Alexander II.

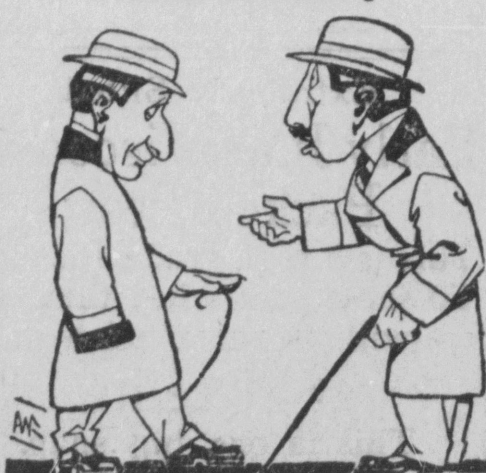

After being imprisoned several times he came to the United States in 1875 and lived in a colony of farmers in Kansas for two years. Then he went to Philadelphia and later worked as a carpenter in a shipyard in Chester, Pa. After that he was in a colony of Shakers near Mount Morris, N. Y., and then he returned to Europe. It was impossible for him then to go to Russia, and in 1880 he made his headquarters in London, where he remained for many years.

He returned to Russia in the latter part of 1907 and was at once arrested. For a time he was imprisoned, but was released when his daughter obtained bail to the amount of $25,000. Tschaikevsky was in America last in 1906 and spoke at the Grand Central palace, in New York, in March of that year.

Mme. Breshkovsky, who has been sentenced to exile, has also been in the United States in the interests of the Russian revolutionist party. Shortly after the arrest of Tschaikevsky and Mme. Breshkovsky many prominent Americans petitioned the Russian authorities that the trials be open.

Tschaikevsky was born in St. Petersburg about sixty-nine years ago. He was educated for a teacher and followed his profession for many years. He spent about ten years of his life in Russian prisons and escaped when about to be sent to Siberia.

EASTER

By ROBERT DONNELL

I BELIEVE that with every Easter dawn a fuller effulgence of spiritual light illuminates the earth. Easter spells optimism. The optimist is the only naturalized citizen of the universe. He is, indeed, a universal denizen, owner of the sphere he treads and inheritor of stars.

Optimism means belief in the eternal goodness, acceptance of so called evil in the full confidence that the evolutionary processes of divine nature are working with absolute certainty toward ultimate perfection.

In my view the person who does not believe in the preponderance of the good over the evil upon this earth has no right to call himself a Christian. He does not believe in Christ, who believed in humanity and loved even those who persecuted him. He does not believe in God, for God is the immanent essence of good residing in all things.

Easter is both pagan and Christian. Centuries before the Nazarene proclaimed good will to men the pagan optimists celebrated the return of spring as the awakening, the rebirth, the resurrection of life out of apparent death.

Every day's dawn is an Easter morning to the optimist. The spirit of aspiration shakes off its lethargy of the night as a useless garment and goes forth each new day to higher altitudes of endeavor.

There was a period in the past century when a movement called transcendentalism stirred the souls of thinking men. Ralph Waldo Emerson was its high priest. Emerson was the transcendent optimist. He acknowledged no evil in the universe. He knew only that which was good and held fast thereto.

We cannot all be Emersonian in intellect, but we can transcend our environment. Many of us are down amid the muck and the muck, but we can look up into the light and by hitching our wagons to the stars be drawn upward into liberty. Grief bludgeons our heads, but it need not bow them. Sorrow pierces our hearts, but it need not break them. If we believe in the justice of the Infinite, these little temporal lives will become to us only as incidents in the irresistible upward leading of the eternal.

Life is the supreme fact. Easter exemplifies the triumph of life. Let us believe only in life, refusing to be dominated by the unsubstantial wraith called death, refusing to be diverted thereby from "the upward looking and the light." Then will Easter be to us the most significant, the most inspiring, the most uplifting of all the days that dawn.

"Call Me Early."

If you're waking call me early; call me early, mother dear. For tomorrow will be Easter—let us hope it may be clear—And you know how long it takes me when I want to look my best. Ere I finish my complexion and can get completely dressed. There are many jealous women who will stare when I appear. So, if you're waking, call me—call me early, mother dear.

My hat cost fourteen dollars, marked from twenty, as you know. It had been a little damaged. They will never guess it, though. They will think I paid the twenty, not a single penny less. And their eyes will do some bulging when they see me come, I guess. The weather man has promised that it shall be warm and clear. Therefore, if you're waking, call me—call me early, mother dear.

And my gown and wrap! Oh, mother, they're the best I've ever had! If the day is only decent I will be supremely glad. I'll insist on being seated near the pulpit, and I'll smile. In a sweet, angelic manner as I travel down the aisle. Get the clock's alarm clock from her. Set it and then keep it near. And be sure to call me early—call me early, mother dear.

The Old Story.

I know not why it is, but every year The story seems more wondrous strange and new. I bend above my lily buds to hear Them whisper softly what I know is true—That winter's past; That spring comes fast; That life and joy are here at last!

Caught in Tenement Blaze.

New York, March 25.—An unidentified man was burned to death, another man and two women were severely injured, and several women and children were overcome by smoke when fire swept through an old-fashioned five-story tenement house at 350 East Ninety-first street.

The Kaiser and the Colonel.

Berlin, March 25.—It has been learned from an official source that Colonel Roosevelt will arrive here on April 12. He will be the personal guest of the Kaiser for four days, during which he will reside at the royal palace.

GOLDSBORO HEARD FROM

A Lady Who Lives in Goldsboro
Joins in the Chorus of Praise for Cardui, The Woman's Tonic.

Goldsboro, N. C.—"A physician treated me for many distressing symptoms," writes Mrs. Etta A. Smith, "but gave me no relief."

"I suffered with neuralgia around the heart and was troubled at times with my head. I had pain in my left side, bowels, left thigh, shoulders and arms."

"After taking Cardui, I am now well and can recommend it to other suffering women."

Just such doubtful symptoms, as those from which Mrs. Smith suffered, are the ones for which it will pay you to take Cardui, the woman's tonic.

It is at such times, when there is nothing to show, for certain, the real cause of the trouble, that you need a tonic, to give the body strength to throw off the illness that evidently threatens.

Take Cardui, when you are ill, with the ailments of your sex. Take Cardui as a tonic, to prevent illness, when you feel it coming.

Your druggist keeps it.

We want that many regular subscribers to our paper. In 1909 we had a daily circulation of 90,246, therefore, we need only 9,754 new readers to reach the mark.

THE INDIANAPOLIS NEWS

The circulation of The Indianapolis News is unique in two particulars. The paper is delivered directly into the homes of more than 94 per cent. of its subscribers; and the circulation, per capita of the population of the city in which it is printed is greater than that of any other paper in the country.

The Indianapolis News, established in 1869, was the first high class two-cent evening paper in the west. It now publishes six regular editions, of from sixteen to twenty-eight pages daily; has the Associated Press and United Press services; 700 special correspondents, covering the news of the state and country; a modern art equipment, and a large and capable editorial staff. Its mechanical equipment, complete in every way, includes twenty-two linotype machines, two sextuplets and two double-deck quintuple color presses, with a total output of 120,000 twelve page papers per hour.

THERE'S A REASON!

In twelve years The News doubled its circulation; there must be a reason for it, and that reason is given in a few words: It's the leading newspaper in Indiana. It's the biggest and best. It's independent. It's clean and instructive.

'Twas Not Her Easter Hat

By BELLE TRIMBLE MATSON.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"O H, mamma, you're not going to wear that hat, are you?" Mildred had tragedy in her voice.

"I am."

"What! Mother, dear," cried Dorothy, running in for glove thread, "that awful hat?"

"Exactly."

"On Easter Monday!" they chimed.

"Now, see here," said their mother, "whose hat is this?"

"Oh, it's not mine," said Mildred. "I'll not dispute ownership."

"Don't you want grammy to see your lovely new Easter hat with the flowers and the plumes?" coaxed Dorothy.

"I don't care to spoil the plumes, and it looks like rain. There's a dripping fog now."

"I think it'll clear," said Mildred hopefully as she pinned on a big plumed hat of her own—gray-blue, like her eyes.

"I can't see why you girls care so much about this hat today. In the first place, it's an all right hat; in the next place, it will be howlingly stylish for grammy's metropolis; in the third place, we shall see no one we know except grammy, whose affection is not dependent on hats; in the fourth place," she added after a silent moment spent in adjusting her veil, "I'm going to wear it, so you may as well save your splutters."

In the ferryboat they found a seat for her, but had to stand themselves. "I can't see," murmured Mildred, "why mother will wear that beast of a hat."

"She looks precisely like the head of the biological department," responded Dorothy under cover of mournful sounds from the fog bell.

"Something's got to happen to it," returned Mildred with spirit. "But today! You can't think, Dot, how perfectly elegant he is. I think 'elegant' is a rather cheap word, but I can't think of a single other one that will describe him. Oh, yes, I can, too—thoroughbred, that's what he is."

"Well, of all elegant, thoroughbred ways to meet a girl's mother!"

"He just couldn't get away from his aunt a day sooner—you know the whole party up there was for him—and he said he just couldn't wait a day longer, so at last I told him we were going away, but if I happened to see him in the station I'd present him. And now she has on that hat!"

"Humph!" said Dorothy. "You'd better spend a little time thinking what sort of an impression he'll make on the 'little mother.'"

"I've been lying awake nights over that, never fear," responded Mildred. The boat thumped up into the slip, and they joined their mother in the push to the front.

They found themselves a few minutes early, and as they stood waiting for the gates to open a tall young man rushed by to Mildred and seized her hand enthusiastically.

"Mamma, this is Mr. Frank Shipley, Mrs. Bronson's nephew, you know. I think I spoke of him after her house party."

The mind of Mildred's mother quickly reviewed all her daughter had said and this most eligible nephew of her own old friend.

"I think you did," she said as she gave him her hand. "Are you going to the country, too, for the Easter holidays?"

"I'm running down to Salem—a bit of business."

"Oh, you're taking our train, then?"

"Am I? How jolly!"

The gates opened then, and he possessed himself of a wrap and an umbrella she was carrying, helped them all on, located her, found a seat for the girls and then dropped down beside Mrs. Bronson a few seats behind her daughters. And if he watched every turn of Mildred's brown head it did not prevent devoted attention to her mother. He kept up a lively chatter until the train had left Woodbury. Shelled him to talk of himself. She heard of his life in the west, of his college in the east, of his two years abroad, of his plans to go west again almost at once and go on with the work his father's dying hand had laid down a year before and which he felt was waiting for him. "Mrs. Bronson," he said suddenly, "I want to ask you something."

She looked at him keenly.

"I want Mildred to marry me. I want to take her back with me. I feel as if my life was just beginning, and I want her to begin it with me. May I ask her?"

"You haven't already done it?"

"She knows I care a lot," he flushed guiltily, but he gazed honestly back into her eyes. "The house party did it. It seems a short time—a week—but when you live right in the house with a girl and see her day and night for that time it's long enough."

Mrs. Bronson sighed.

"I've been awfully afraid to ask you. It's so much to ask for, and, besides, I've been afraid of you. My aunt told me you were quite imposing—tremendously stylish, and so on. You can't think how relieved I was when I saw you. I believe," he blundered on—"I believe it's your hat. You're an awfully—an awfully homey looking person, you know."

A deeper color shone in Mrs. Bronson's face and a swift gleam lighted her youthful, clear brown eyes. She leaned forward and called softly. Mildred rose and came back to her.

"Send Dorothy here to me," said her mother, "and take your young man away. I'll have no such stalwart looking man say I look motherly to him. And he is making remarks about my hat. Maybe you can persuade him to go to Salem another day and get off at the Farms for dinner with us. But take him away, do."

The girls never knew how it happened that the Salvation Army so soon fell heir to the runaway hat, but after the wedding, as Frank and Mildred were speeding toward their new home in the west, Frank suddenly burst out, "No, sir, I don't see how I should ever have had the courage if it hadn't been for that hat!"

Money Saving.

Twice a year the Cooperative Building and Loan Association starts a new series of stock, the next series beginning Monday, April 4. This gives every citizen of Seymour and Jackson county a splendid opportunity to save money in small amounts each week, and at the same time have the money earning dividends from the time it is paid in. The plan is this:

Every stockholder pays in each week twenty-five cents for each share he owns. These combined payments are loaned by the Association and secured by first mortgage on real estate. The interest on these loans is paid monthly. Every three months this interest and other profits accruing are distributed to the credit of each series of stock according to the amount that has been paid in on the series. The amount of dividend on each series goes to the credit of each stockholder in the series. This is repeated every three months until such time as the payments by the stockholder and the dividends amount to one hundred dollars. Then the stock is matured and the stockholder draws out the full one hundred dollars per share.

At the opening of the new series is the best time to take stock and begin regular saving of money where it will earn additional money all the time. Besides the regular money-saving habit is a good one to cultivate.

See the secretary, Thos. J. Clark, at once and arrange for as many shares as you wish to carry. Opera house block.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Before I used Foley's Kidney Pills I was subjected to severe backache and pains in my kidneys with suppression and oftentimes a cloudy voiding. While upon arising in the morning I would get dull headaches. Now I have taken three bottles of Foley's Kidney Pills and feel 100 per cent. better. Talk.

Good talk has so much shorthand that it cannot be reported. The infection, the change of voice, the shrug, cannot be caught on paper. The best of it is when the subject unexpectedly goes cross lots, by a flash of short cut, to a conclusion so suddenly revealed that it has the effect of wit. It needs the highest culture and the finest breeding to prevent the conversation from running into mere persiflage on the one hand—its common fate—or monologue on the other. Our conversation is largely chaff.—Charles Dudley Warner.

THE VALUE OF GOOD PLUMBING

Good plumbing is one of the most important features of the home and should receive your careful attention at all times.

When you consider that the health of the entire household is governed absolutely by domestic sanitary conditions, you can readily see the extreme necessity of equipping your home with only the best and most sanitary fixtures to be had.

Many people pay out yearly for doctor bills, for sickness caused by deadly sewer gases due to poor and imperfect plumbing, more than the difference between the cost of the cheapest and the best work.

This fact alone should be sufficient to warrant your close attention. If your plumbing equipment is not thoroughly modern, let us quote you a price on installing new fixtures and correcting the defective piping, etc. We sell and install "Standard" plumbing fixtures, because of their thorough sanitary efficiency, lasting service and because they are absolutely guaranteed. When Raleigh Lost His Head.

Sir Walter Raleigh had just spread his cloak over the mud puddle so that Queen Liza might not wet her understandings as she crossed the street. "What a sign of high breeding!" enthused her majesty.

"Say, rather, madam," smiled Sir Walter, bumping his nose on the curb stone as he bowed, "waterproof of devotion."

Now we know why Raleigh was executed.

It was on account of this occasion when he undoubtedly lost his head.—London Scraps.

Samuel Johnson and the Sauce.

"Long ago," writes a correspondent of the London Spectator, "I had an elderly acquaintance who told me that she had formerly known an aged lady who in her youth had met Samuel Johnson at dinner. The matriarch—so to call her—being asked whether she remembered any sayings or doings of the great man, unwillingly admitted that the only action of his which she could recall was that he took up a sauce tureen of melted butter and complacently poured its contents down his throat."

The Redcoats.

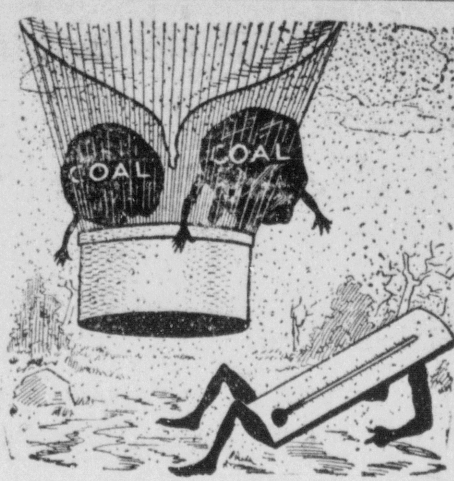

An incident at the siege of Rouen in 1591 shows that red was looked upon as the English color, for in mentioning the death of one of the Earl of Essex's captains it is remarked that the Frenchman who shot him got near enough to do so by putting on the red coat of a dead English soldier. In 1643 the king's life guards, as also the queen's and Prince Rupert's, wore red coats.

Miracle Stops Flow of Lava.

Catania, March 26.—The lava advancing toward Borelli reached within two miles of the town, when it suddenly changed its direction and flowed around the hill. It is now descending in the direction of Nicolosi, the inhabitants of which thought themselves safe. They held a thanksgiving service yesterday, but are now terror-stricken. Their only hope is that the progress of the stream will be impeded by Monti Rossi, but the lava at present is heading straight for Nicolosi. It is causing much damage. It has obliterated every trace of five large, prosperous farms.

The inhabitants of Borelli ascribe their deliverance to the miraculous intervention of the images of the town's patron saint, which were freely scattered over the fields and placed in the lava's path. A sudden change in the direction of the stream occurred in the same locality where the eruption of 1822 stopped near a rustic shrine consisting of three altars, on which images of the Madonna and saints are painted. The coincidence is considered miraculous.

The crater at Volta San Girolamo is still the most active of any of the openings. Besides the emission of the lava it is discharging so-called bombs which are hurled high in the air, exploding with loud reports resembling a heavy bombardment.

Nicolosi is packed with tourists, mainly British and Americans, who have flocked to witness the eruption. Lines of soldiers are employed to keep the tourists back from places of danger. The attitude of the visitors contrasts strangely with that of the inhabitants, whose abject terror and anguish are heartrending. Their prayers for protection are interspersed with curses against the lava, while the sightseers are filled with admiration of the mighty display of the forces of nature.

Cardinal Francis Nava, archbishop of Catania, is taking from Catania the miraculous veil of St. Agatha to Nicolosi and Belpasso. The inhabitants believe that it will stop the flow of lava.

Indianapolis, March 26.—"I have sown all my wild oats and I find the way of the transgressor is hard." These were some of the words Charles Ettinger, a streetcar motorman, wrote before he went to the bridge over the canal at West street. Removing his coat with the note in it, Ettinger vaulted the railing of the bridge and plunged into the canal.

PITTSBURG PIT OF ROTTENNESS

Grand Jury Lays Bare Details of Official Iniquity.

BANKS DEEPLY IMPLICATED

In a Scathing Presentment Inquisitorial Body Reveals the Extent of Its Investigation Into Methods Adopted by Depository Banks to Secure Valuable Concession From Greedy and Covetous Councils—Thirty-One Additional Councilmen Have Been Ordered Arrested—The Whole Vile Story Coming Out.

Pittsburg, March 26.—A succession of surprises has been furnished by the special grand jury drawn to consider councilmanic bribery cases. Aside from indicting thirty-one additional councilmen charged with accepting bribes for their votes, the arrests of two former confessing councilmen were ordered on the ground that they had not told the whole truth. At the same time the court laid bare the entire rottenness of Pittsburg councils in one of the most caustic and vigorous presentments ever handed down in any city.

That an effort will be made to place much blame for grafting and bribe-giving on James W. Friend, millionaire banker, who died recently, and on ex-Mayor James Wyman of Allegheny, who was buried Thursday, was made plain by the trend of the presentment.

In addition to this the grand jury handed to the court a list showing how much money each of the fifty-four councilmen actually received in bribes in connection with a certain ordinance and also the amount each was supposed to get. The amounts ranged from $100 to $500.

Orders to arrest ex-Councilman Simon Mathies and Frank H. Bonini came as a clap of thunder. Mathies is a butcher who on the first day for confessions of grafters, it is claimed, perjured himself in that he did not tell the whole truth. The same charge applies to Bonini, a rich Italian fruit dealer.

After naming six national banks which it alleges bribed councilmen to name them as city depositories, the grand jury recommends that the proper officials take legal action to nullify the ordinance naming the Farmers' Deposit National bank, the Second National bank of Pittsburg, the German National bank of Allegheny, the German National bank of Pittsburg, the Columbia National bank of Pittsburg and the Workingman's Savings and Trust company of Allegheny as city depositories.

The presentment describing how some of the money was obtained read in part as follows: "Pursuant to an arrangement made between Charles Stewart and the late James W. Friend and his associates who represented three banks, Charles Stewart was introduced by a man at present unknown. Two cards were made out in duplicate; one was given to the said Charles Stewart, the other was given to the unnamed person. Stewart made several trips to New York and finally engaged a room in the Hotel Imperial in the city of New York under an assumed name; the stranger aforesaid came to this room at the time appointed. Stewart showed him his card, and the stranger then left upon a bed a package containing the sum of $45,000; $7,500 was also paid to the said Stewart by said three banks or persons interested therein prior to the payment of $45,000 as aforesaid. This sum of $52,500 was contributed by the three banks before mentioned or by persons who were largely interested in said banks, and said sums were turned over and became part of the pool."

Efforts to blame much of the bribe-giving on the dead James W. Friend has caused much indignation among friends of the dead man. The grand jury has taken a recess until Monday, when additional indictments are expected.

By a Unanimous Vote.

Washington, March 26.—By an absolutely unanimous vote the house elected its new committee on rules of ten members, in accordance with the report of the Republican and Democratic caucuses as follows: Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Smith of Iowa, Boutelle of Illinois, Lawrence of Massachusetts, Fassett of New York and Smith of California, Republicans; Clark of Missouri, Underwood of Alabama, Dixon of Indiana and Fitzgerald of New York, Democrats.

Americans Lose Schooners.

VICTOR MURDOCK

Intimates That Insurgents Are Not Through With Uncle Joe.

INSURGENTS AROUSED

Did Uncle Joe, After All, Name That New Rules Committee?

Washington, March 26.—Representative Nick Longworth of Ohio, son-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt, was denied a place on the rules committee, according to report, as a result of an objection made by Speaker Cannon.

Early in the week Representative Tawney made the announcement that Mr. Longworth's name had been placed on the slate which he believed would be adopted by the Republican caucus. In fact, Mr. Tawney strongly urged that Longworth be given this assignment on the ground that although a regular he was popular with the insurgents. When the slate was submitted to Speaker Cannon, it is said Mr. Cannon drew a line through Longworth's name.

Uncle Joe told his lieutenants, so it is reported, that Mr. Longworth had been very free in his criticisms of the speaker and that he would not consent to Mr. Longworth's advancement to the committee on rules. A good deal of gossip has been provoked by the report and insurgents want to know if it is true that the speaker's dictum was followed in this case and if he actually framed the slate submitted to the caucus.

Insurgents in the house are beginning to talk of further action against Speaker Cannon before the present session is over. Victor Murdock of Kansas said that while nothing would be done while the Taft program is pending, there may be a movement to oust the speaker after the list of administration bills has been disposed of. The excuse that the insurgents gave for not voting for Speaker Cannon's retirement when they had the opportunity was that it would cause endless confusion and might jeopardize the president's program.

Some of Uncle Joe's friends have urged him to come out with an announcement that he will not be a candidate for re-election as speaker, but this he has declined to do thus far.

CAIRO LIONIZING THE LION HUNTER

The Occupation of the Hour at Egypt's Capital.

Cairo, March 26.—The supreme occupation of the hour here is lionizing the lion hunter. Colonel Roosevelt has made a complete conquest of the city and its environs. Shepherd's hotel, where Colonel Roosevelt and his party are stopping, is besieged by curious crowds and the police have difficulty in keeping the streets open for traffic.

Americans have flocked in during the last few days for the purpose of welcoming the ex-president, and they form a large element in the admiring throng. Hotel keepers, tradesmen, donkey-boys and others are generally well satisfied, as the Roosevelt fever has given a big fillip to what had hitherto been a bad season, and has brought at least temporary prosperity.

Colonel Roosevelt is constantly followed by a mob of amateur photographers and would-be interviewers, and he sometimes uses strategy to avoid them. But it cannot be said that he seeks to hide his light under a bushel all the time. Those who get in personal touch with him are enthusiastic over his affability and the consideration he manifests for them.

The khedive gave a luncheon today in honor of Colonel Roosevelt. Subsequently the colonel visited the Azhar university and will this evening attend a dinner given by Mr. Iddings, the American consul general.

The Nationalist newspapers continue to attack Roosevelt for interfering with Egyptian politics, but so far from detracting from his popularity, the attacks seem to increase the keen interest felt in all his movements. Strict members of the Christian sects who observe Good Friday as a holy day are scandalized that the Roosevelt should have spent yesterday in sightseeing.

FLAMES CAUGHT THEM IN A TRAP

Twelve Women and Three Men Perish at Chicago.

DEATH LIST MAY BE SWELLED

Three Persons Are Still Unaccounted For and the Ruins of the Fish Furniture Company's Store at Chicago Are Being Searched For Possible Additional Victims—Caught on the Sixth Floor, the Victims of Fierce Blaze Were Powerless to Escape the Devouring Flames.

Chicago, March 26.—In a fire in the L. Fish Furniture company's store, Nineteenth street and Wabash avenue, twelve women and three men lost their lives. Eleven bodies have been recovered by the firemen. Seventeen persons are known to have been on the fatal sixth floor. Only two are known to have escaped. The other three are still unaccounted for. Their bodies are being searched for in the debris. The dead:

Lichtenstein, Ethel, twenty years old, leaped from the sixth floor. Burden, Mrs. Hannah, thirty years old. Anderson, Ethel, eighteen years old. Brusnokof, Rose, seventeen years old. Mitchell, Henry M., forty years old; auditor. Bell, Minor, thirty-eight years old, advertising manager. St. Clair, Bert, twenty-eight years old; confidential clerk. Green, William, twenty-four years old; clerk. McGrath, Veronica, seventeen years old. Wargo, Mary, twenty years old. Sullivan, Lillian, sixteen years old. Quinn, Gertrude, twenty years old, private secretary.

Missing: Three women, names not learned. Seven of the bodies were found in the corner on the sixth floor. They were huddled together. Two of the victims had died while kneeling, as if to offer prayer before the flames reached them.

The bodies were not far from the front windows. This caused the firemen to believe that all the victims perished in a vain attempt to reach safety by means of the windows. The victims had been trapped on the top floor, nearly 100 feet from the ground, with no chance of escape and the flames roaring so furiously about them that the firemen could not raise ladders to go to their rescue. Minor W. Bell, one of the department managers of the company, and H. M. Mitnell, auditor of the firm, and a brother-in-law of Isaac Fish, gave their lives to save the girls who were trapped by the flames. Both of them were in places of safety when they heard the cries of the girls on the top floor. With no concern for themselves they ran up the burning stairways, where they perished with the girls they tried to save.

The fire started from an explosion. It burned for three hours, threatening to spread to other buildings adjoining, but after a stubborn fight was extinguished. Leo Stoecker, an employee of the firm, was arrested by Detective Horn in the crowd of spectators while the fire was in progress. He said he was filling an automatic cigar lighter with alcohol on the fourth floor. The device was lighted and ignited the fumes from a six-gallon can of benzine near him, causing a terrific explosion and starting the fire.

The Marker Case. Indianapolis, March 26.—It is expected that the case of W. H. Marker of Tipton, charged with violating the national banking laws, which has been on trial in the federal court for several days, will reach the jury this afternoon.

FOUND LIVE WIRE

Why the Democratic Editors Side-stepped That Marshall Proposition.

[Special Correspondence.]

Indianapolis, March 26.—Indiana Democratic editors, members of the executive committee of the Indiana Democratic editorial association, found they were monkeying with a "live wire," as J. Frank Hanly would say, when they met to discuss the proposition of state convention action on the Democratic United States senatorial selection. Clay W. Metsker, of Plymouth, head of the editorial organization, the man who has thus far steered the newspaper men according to the compass-boxing of Thomas Taggart, Indiana Democratic director general, found himself all at sea when he attempted to tell the editorial executive committee what to do in the senatorial matter. He found that Governor Marshall had a fine array of supporters on the ground, and that the Marshall men were bent on doing something to show their loyalty to the Democratic governor, and their approval of his plan for state convention endorsement of the party's senatorial candidate.

It was only backing water with all speed, and by suggesting that nothing be done by either side to the controversy, that President Metsker was able to avoid the storm zone. The Democratic editors were worried when they went into session, and they were uneasy all through their meeting, for fear that some rampant partisan on one side or the other, would spring resolutions either denouncing the governor's idea, or demanding its approval. The session of the editorial executive committee was not called to order until President Metsker, and the advocates of compromise and peace had assured themselves that no revolutionary or radical resolutions were concealed about the chest-pockets of any editor. When the few members of the executive committee had been carefully searched for loaded cartridges and hand grenades such as that Governor Marshall threw against the Pluto pavilion the other day, they were admitted to council under vows that they proposed to discuss nothing more than the question of the best date for the holding of the coming mid-summer meeting of the editorial association. It was with some difficulty that the more enthusiastic Marshall editors were prevented from plunging headlong into argument on the senatorial proposition. If Mr. Metsker, the president of the association, had not made peace-peace proposals, or if he had urged on the meeting the anti-Marshall action which he demanded in a circular letter recently sent by him to the members of the body, it is likely that the executive committee, which met to talk of picnics, would have ended by quarreling.

George B. Lockwood of Marion, former secretary to former Vice President Fairbanks, was in Indianapolis to attend the reception to the Fairbanks on their return from abroad. Mr. Lockwood is editor of the Marion Chronicle, a Republican newspaper of great force in Northern Indiana. He believes in standing by the Republican platforms of 1908, state and national and urges his party followers to rally for the administration. Mr. Lockwood was not for Taft before the Chicago convention of 1908, but he is declaring at this time that the people ought to give President Taft their support and confidence. "I believe President Taft is an honest man," says Mr. Lockwood, "and he has three years yet to serve the people. I believe he will give a good account of himself."

E. P. Kling of Peru, reports that Republican prospects are good in the Eleventh district, where he is a candidate for congress. Mr. Kling says that four announced congressional candidates have agreed to make, and are making, the friendliest sort of a contest for the nomination. Oscar E. Bland of Linton, who is running for the Republican congressional nomination in the Second district, without present opposition, is optimistic as to the outcome of the election in his district. W. A. Cullop, Democratic congressman, who is to be renominated, has some fundamental weaknesses which are expected to work his undoing this year. Former Congressman John C. Chaney is being urged to make the race for the Republican nomination for secretary of state.

Editor Simons, of Monticello, who stood alone to oppose that French Lick excursion of Democratic editors, declared for Laporte as a meeting place, and said that he did not desire a too close association with Thomas Taggart and French Lick. He doubted the political advisability of taking the editors to the neighborhood of the Pluto influence and professed to see the shadow of the famous Casino falling athwart the editorial festivities. He was one against twelve, and the Taggart invitation was accepted.

It is now asserted that seventy-five of the ninety-two Democratic county chairmen in Indiana are against Governor Marshall's plan to have the Democratic state convention select a Democratic senatorial candidate. But one congressman among the Democratic delegation from Indiana, Moss of the Fifth, favors the Marshall plan, and he is said to be for it because John E. Lamb is for it and Mr. Lamb is a candidate for the senatorship. Senator Shively is against the Marshall scheme.

HER EASTER FLOWER

A Dead Rosebush and the Way It Came to Life Again.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Henry Dean walked home from prayer meeting with Rose Brayton. When they stopped at the gate of her home Rose did not invite Henry to come inside, and so he lingered there, as usual, speaking of petty village matters while words of love burned on his lips.

"Rose—Rose," he said at last, "won't you ever forget Jim and love me a little?"

"Please don't say any more, Henry. I like you so much, and it only hurts me to have you speak that way—as if I could ever forget Jim! My heart is buried with him."

"If your heart is buried with him, surely, Rose, it must awaken soon. Look all about you and see the shrubs quickening under the touch of spring and think of the little buried seeds and bulbs in the ground soon to burst forth into new life. Nothing is dead forever, and you were not meant to waste your life mourning over Jim Carey or any other man."

Rose laughed softly, a cold, triumphant smile curving her lips. "Come with me, Henry; I will show you something that is dead—something that will never come to life again. It is dead—dead as my heart."

Silently he followed her across the grass to a moonlit space blurred by a small shadow in the middle. Rose bent above it, and he saw that it was a rosebush, dry and leafless and without even the promise of swelling buds.

"This rosebush is dead. Jim planted it here the day we became engaged. It bloomed all that summer and fall long after the other roses had faded. It has not blossomed since he died, and it never will again. Now it is dead too."

"How do you know it is?" demanded Henry obstinately. "Perhaps the roots are alive. It may need pruning." He dropped to his knees and pulled out his pocketknife.

"Don't you touch it, Henry Dean! I would rather it remained dead than any one should bring it to life! It belongs to me—it's mine—my poor little rose!" Her slight form interposed between him and the rosebush, and he got upon his feet, with a strange expression in his eyes.

"Your argument seems unanswerable, Rose, but I know that seemingly dead roses have come to life, and just so surely I predict that some day your buried heart will come to life and love more tenderly than it ever did before." With a sudden gesture he drew her into his arms and strained her to his breast, and for an instant her cold cheek was pressed against his own. Then he released her, and without another word or glance he turned away and strode out of the gate.

After that evening in the garden he avoided Rose Brayton. He stayed away from church and prayer meeting, where the sermons hinted of the approaching Easter, which on this occasion occurred late in April, with its symbols of resurrection. The reawakening of spring from the deathlike sleep of winter seemed too close to the troubles of his own heart.

One evening he paused and looked over the fence at the bush. It seemed to have shrunk in size, and he gazed intently. Then, with a sudden impulse, he leaped the fence and walked over the grass. It was the same bush, but some hand had carefully pruned the branches until they appeared just above the ground. He broke off one close to the root and placed it in his pocket. All the way home he whistled softly to himself, wondering if Rose had pruned the little bush, hoping it would break forth into new life. Perhaps the awakening of spring was in her veins after all!

In his own room he looked at the branch and saw that the wood was quite dead and decayed. The little bush was dead indeed.

The next day he heard that Rose Brayton had gone away to visit a cousin until Easter, and with the knowledge came a daring idea. He drove over to the town that afternoon and visited a florist.

"I'll do the best I can," said the man doubtfully as he led Henry through the warm, sweet smelling rose houses. The sun shone down through the glass on the long rows of every variety of rosebush. Red and yellow, pink and white and cream beauties nodded from graceful stems above Henry's wistful eyes.

"Here is a little rose that may be just what you want, sir. It is budding finely now. By forcing it I think I can promise you it will bloom on Easter Sunday. If you put it in the ground, then, as you say you want to do, I won't guarantee that it will live long, but if it's in a sunny garden it may do well, after all."

"So long as it blooms on Easter Sunday I don't care," declared Henry recklessly, and after completing his arrangements he drove home again.

As he passed the Brayton house he saw Rose's mother bending over the little rosebush in the garden—the one Jim Carey had planted—and he wondered if it had really come to life again. He visited it late that night, feeling like a marauder as he invaded the silent moonlit garden. But the little bush remained unchanged—in fact, investigation showed that the stalks were quite dead.

On Good Friday he paid another visit to the florist and came home late at night with a large bundle propped carefully on the seat beside him. He learned that Rose was coming home late the next evening. She was to play the organ for the Easter music, and very likely she would go from the train straight to rehearsal in the church.

The moon had waned by this time, and the evenings were dark, and this condition suited Henry's purposes very well. He was in the church when Rose arrived with a little flurry of greeting from the members of the choir. There was to be special music for the occasion, and Henry and his violin had been pressed into service.

Rose bent her head in grave salutation as she passed him and seated herself at the organ. An instant later all personalities were drowned in the endeavor to bring the choir into accord with the music. When the rehearsal was over Henry did not wait for Rose Brayton. He tucked his violin carefully away in its case and went home.

It was long after midnight when he came forth from his own gate bearing a dark object in his arms. In one hand he carried a strong little spade. Although it was dark, the way to the rosebush in Rose Brayton's garden was familiar ground. At last he stood beside it for an instant irresolute. Around him the darkness seemed to press softly. He could smell the fresh turf, wet by recent rain, and the pungent odor of a yellow flowering shrub near by.

With a sudden impulse he bent down and dug up the dead roots of the little rosebush Jim Carey had planted. Then he replaced it with a strong, sturdy little bush he had obtained from the florist green with leaves and blushing with a multitude of half opened buds. Carefully, as well as he could in the darkness, he cleared away the debris and went home, but not to sleep. When morning came he was pale and tired eyed. In the church he purposely arranged his chair so that he might not meet Rose Brayton's eyes—indignant, contemptuous, as they must be. He heard her when she came in, and he was conscious of her presence throughout the service.

That evening the service was repeated, and the music wore upon his nerves, and he was glad when it was all over. He had escaped to the door when he saw Rose just ahead of him. She had declined a proffered escort and was flitting alone in the darkness. He caught a glimpse of a light colored dress, and as in a dream he heard one girl speak to another one, "Rose Brayton's got on a blue dress!"

He found himself speeding after Rose with a strange exultation in his heart. Could it be true, after all, that Rose might care for some one else? But perhaps it was somebody she had met while away. So he tortured himself as he followed her home. At the gate he put forth a detaining hand as it closed behind her.

"Rose," he said. She paused and came toward him. There was, or he fancied it, a little tremble in her voice. "Yes," was all she said. He opened the gate and boldly took her hand. He led her across the grass to the spot where the rosebush was planted. A broad square of light from some window in the house formed a setting for the bush Henry had planted at midnight. Its pink blossoms seemed to clutch at his heart. So much depended on that little bush.

"I thought you said—you said the little bush was dead, Rose. Were you not surprised to come home and find it alive and blooming?" he asked.

Rose did not withdraw her hand from his—indeed, she drew a little closer. "Yes, I was surprised, Henry, but you see I have had so many surprises lately."

There was something in her voice that emboldened Henry to take her unresisting into his arms. "And what are the surprises, darling?" he asked.

"First, that you ran away so quickly that—other night here in the garden. Second, that I did not care after that whether the little bush lived or not. I am very shallow and wicked, I know. And, third"—She drew away and touched the pink roses with tender fingers.

"And third and last?" asked Henry, drawing closer to her face, radiant in the lamplight.

"Last of all, I am surprised to find pink roses growing on a little bush that has always borne white ones." She was laughing at his chagrin.

"I, too, am finding pink roses where white ones bloomed so long," said Henry, with sudden ardor. And then the pink roses in her cheeks changed to deeper crimson under the magic touch of his lips.

The Story of The Resurrection

IN the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

And for fear of him the keepers did shake and became as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women, fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you.

And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held him by the feet and worshipped him.

Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

Dying Ruler of Abyssinia Loses Scepter of State.

OLD KING DYING

The regent is the guardian of Prince Lidj Jeassu, grandson of the king and heir to the throne of Abyssinia.

In accordance with the decision of the chiefs the empress is to be deprived of all power of interference in the affairs of state. All of her appointments made among her favorites have been annulled. At present she appears to be resigned to the enforced renunciation of the power heretofore wielded. The capital is tranquil and the safety of foreigners is assured.

THE SAYLER CASE IS HOLDING ATTENTION

Mrs. Saylor Shrank When Husband's Clothes Were Shown.

Watseka, Ill., March 26.—Clothing taken from the body of John B. Saylor was exhibited to the jury in the trial of Dr. W. R. Miller, Mrs. John B. Saylor and John Grunden for the murder of the Crescent banker last July. As garment after garment was lifted up in court, Mrs. Saylor, one of the three defendants, bowed her head and shrank back in the seat; the face of her father and co-defendant, John Grunden, twitched convulsively, while Dr. W. R. Miller remained calm and impassive. Golda Saylor, daughter of the woman on trial, leaned closer to her mother and hid her face, while a hush fell over the room.

The garments were identified by Ben A. Duesler, the undertaker who prepared the body for burial, who as a witness told of examining the body and finding four bullet wounds, two through the chest and one in each arm.

Duesler said that Mrs. Saylor expressed no regret when she viewed the body of her husband, and testified that all Mrs. Saylor said when she saw the wound in his right arm was, "I did not think it went through," and added, "I did not think he was shot that many times," when she saw all the wounds. The garments shown were entered as exhibits in the case and were turned over to the court officials.

H. D. McDonald of Chicago, while visiting at Fairfield, Ia., shot and killed his bride and then killed himself. The affair is shrouded in mystery.

IT IMPRESSED HIM

Work Among the Filipinos Praised by Mr. Fairbanks.

Indianapolis, March 26.—Speaking of his trip around the world, former Vice President Fairbanks said that the most surprising thing he met was the improvements that have been made in the Philippines.

"Nobody can imagine," he said, "what has been accomplished there under American occupation. The educational department is established on very broad lines. There are 500,000 boys and girls in the public schools out of a population of 7,000,000. Of course many dialects are spoken in the islands, but now many of the different tribes are able to speak with each other through the medium of the English language. The natural resources of the islands are being developed gradually. The government is studying the natural resources in a scientific manner, and the productivity of the islands may be considerably increased by the adoption of more enlightened methods."

Returned to Great Falls.

Col. Barton W. Armstrong, who has been visiting relatives here and in Lawrence county for some time, left this week for his home at Great Falls, Montana. Mr. Armstrong has extensive real estate interests in that locality. He is located in the first county west of the great Judith Basin where Mr. and Mrs. Henry Borchering and their two daughters, formerly of near Hometown, located last May. Mr. Borchering sold his farm in Hamilton township three years ago and located on a farm of several hundred acres which he purchased near Manitou, Manitoba. He has since purchased a fine farm of 480 acres in the Judith Basin in Montana and is once more a resident of the United States. This basin contains about two thousand square miles of rich farming lands, much of which has never yet been improved. It is surrounded by the high mountains on every side which protects the country from the extreme cold winds and where one may see snow every day in the year. Improved lands can be purchased there for $20 per acre.

Mr. Borchering's son is still in Canada and is looking after their farming interests there. They are well pleased with their investments at both places and expect to make a handsome profit by being on the ground early.

Decreasing Supply.

In cooperation with the National Hickory Association, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has just completed a canvass of the principal hickory-using establishments to ascertain their annual requirements.

In the last few years the users of hickory have become very much alarmed over the decreasing supply; so far, however, it has been impossible to get satisfactory statistics either of the total quantity of hickory yet standing in the forests or of the amount used each year. This is partly because a great deal of hickory is cut by small portable or by stationary mills, which, after consuming all the timber within a radius of from two to eight miles are either sold or moved to new points. Much hickory is also split into billets for spokes, handles, etc., instead of being sawed into lumber. Altogether, therefore, it is extremely difficult to make even a fair estimate of the total hickory consumption.
